Requisite: COMM 1160 Introduction to Communication

This course is structured to organize the different theories of human communication and examine interconnections between them. A broad spectrum of theoretical development is explored encompassing intrapersonal, interpersonal, group, organizational, mass, social, and cultural communication theories. Application of the theories is an important component of the class, especially in making the ideas relevant to the context of Chinese society and Hong Kong experience in order to provide a foundation to meet the dynamic changes in the discipline of communication.
