

well as conceptual development. The course also addresses the processes of transformation from ideas and images into visual art with consideration of contemporary ideologies and critical debates. Students will be encouraged to start with traditional approaches to painting in terms of seeing it as a self-sufficient discipline and further develop to experimental approaches towards interdisciplinary. Alongside with given studio exercises, lectures and tutorials will be scheduled for addressing major topics in contemporary painting relating to identity concerns, spiritual issues and political debates, and discussing how these issues are relevant to students own practice. By the end of the course, student will have a set of work completed according to their self-initiated theme, which will be further applied onto their future study of the subject.

V.A. 3360 Wearables as Media (3,4,0) (tbc)

Prerequisite: V.A. 2560 Wearables

The aim of this course is to produce wearables not merely as fashionable articles for next season's market consumption, but as cultural objects with the potential to critique or transform the social or political environment.

The course explores how wearables play a central role in defining our identity, by looking at the ethical, environmental, political and social issues of clothing, fashion and textiles along with the role of the artist/designer operating within these spheres of cultural production. It also sheds light on strategies that artists and creative designers employ in their work practices to transform or critique society through wearable art/design pieces. The studio-part of the course involves the application of such creative concepts, where appropriate methods and materials will be tested in order to create design solutions. The outcomes will be wearables and/or accessories that "can create models for possible worlds and possible bits of worlds." (Bourriaud, 2002) In this way wearables play a central role in defining and communicating our identity.

The goal of this course is to produce conscientious artists and designers who are willing and able to take responsibility for the material goods and services they produce, the effects these have on our social, political and ecological environment and who can articulate their perspectives using creative strategies. Its underlying intention is to foster awareness of the massive implications of applied human creativity in the fashion industry, and how the things we wear affect and intervene with our everyday lives on multiple levels. In doing so students are equipped with advanced skills in the production of their own wearable prototypes.

V.A. 3380 Convention and Innovation (3,4,0) (E/C) in Chinese Painting

Prerequisite: V.A. 2700 Visual Literacy in Chinese Painting

As Hong Kong serves as a point of convergence of Chinese and Western cultural narratives, "hybridity" comes to be a primary means for local artists, especially ink artists, to take into their art creation. For better understanding Chinese cultural heritage, the course requires students to explore the conventions embedded in guohua for thousands of years. The aim of such training is to enhance and build up visual literacy in Chinese painting. With the introduction of the concept of "hybridity", students are expected to reveal the local cultural identity on the basis of the integration of the convention(s) of guohua with Western mode of expression.

This course is divided into two sections: (1) exploration in conventional Chinese painting; and (2) innovative creativity with the concept of "hybridity". The former section aims at exploring possibilities of guohua (literally translated as national painting) based on the research of the conventional concepts and ideas. Both xieyi (free style) and gongbi (fine-brush, or delicate, style) are the focuses. The provision of the latter section is the concept of "hybridity", which is regarded as a crucial artistic means for ink artist to revive the ancient art form of guohua and reveal Hong Kong cultural identity. Through adapting, appropriating and revising the mode(s) of expression from Western art, students learn how to reconcile "Chineseness" and "modernism/contemporaneity" to create Chinese painting with a contemporary new look.

V.A. 3390 Picture Book (3,4,0) (E)

Prerequisite: V.A.2230 Typography or V.A.2400 Graphic Storytelling

This course aims to develop student's storytelling skills and the ability to conceptualize complex visualization in the form of picture book. It provides a platform for the students to explore how images, text, graphics and other visual elements can be used to inform, explain and narrate complex "story" in a unique and creative way.

The course emphasizes the importance of research in the stage of idea-development. Through lectures, workshops and field trip, students will have chance to explore various methodologies that could help them to conduct research on related topics. They will need to initiate their own story idea and develop strategy to gather, organize and articulate contents and information for creative use. To enrich student's visual language, advance topics in story structure, story setting, character design, visualization, image-text interactions and book illustration will be covered. Students are also encouraged to experiment with various approaches in visual expression in order to establish their own personal style.

Besides, the course will provide a comprehensive overview of the history and contemporary practice in the areas stated above by introducing classical works and modern examples. Alternative and cutting-edge models of publishing methods will also be examined to encourage students to challenge the concept of a "picture book".

V.A. 3410 Experiments in Moving Image (3,4,0) (E)

Prerequisite: V.A. 2380 Sound: The Basics or V.A. 2720 Looking through the Lens

This course aims at offering students unconventional perspectives on moving image and sound. Notions of creativity and usages of digital moving image and sound gears as artistic tools are highlighted. Hence, the course strongly encourages mixed genres and personal experiments.

Students will learn the art of moving image and sound that inherently stress the significance of experimentation in visual rhetoric, mass media (TV) criticism, and the spirits of boldness in contemporary art making. Students will learn histories, technological/cultural contexts and artistic practices of experimental film/video art.

As an intermediate level course, students will learn digital video production including camera work and the use of supported gears, the craft of three-point lighting and its variations, and also the knowledge of safety and different types of lighting gears.

After taking this course, students should be ready for upper-level courses that are research-based and aim at exploring further on novelty of time-based media. This course also supports students working on other areas of arts with elements of moving image and sound, such as interactive media, hypermedia and installation art works.

V.A. 3430 Self-Identity through Jewellery (3,4,0) (E)

Prerequisite: V.A. 2550 Small-Metal Jewellery

Jewellery has always been about identity. From pre-historic time till the mid-20th century, people wore jewellery to showcase their wealth, power, social and religious status, superiority and their aesthetic sense. After the Second World War, many of the societies in Europe and America were turned upside down. The great loss of lives made many artists questioned the traditional values, and reflected on the question of self-identity. The scarcity of materials also pushed many artists to start making jewellery. Together with the new materials made available through technology advancement, the studio jewellery movement was born. At the core of the movement is a deep desire to establish value and identity through jewellery. In many ways, jewellery is the ideal art form to consider anxiety about identity, and to explore the possibilities of utilizing or challenging traditional meanings.

In this course, students will be guided to develop a series of work in exploring their own identity. They will start by studying the traditional meanings of jewellery, and their connections to the underlying craftsmanship. Once these connections are made,
